F*aith Seeking Peace* is a timely and innovative series of study guides that place biblical texts in conversation with the critical issues of our day. The curriculum addresses federal budget priorities; the cost of war; nuclear weapons; women and war; terrorism; and working for peace, locally and globally. Across the country, religious communities are using this resource to introduce and invigorate dialogue on the implications of faith in a time of war.

What people are saying about Faith Seeking Peace

From religious leaders

“Powerful, persuasive, provocative, well informed... faithful. The information is presented in wonderfully reflective cadence even with the inclusion of hard facts, statistics, data. All is continually presented with a return to the human face, the woman’s dilemma, the spirit of the living God.”

—Dr. Alton B. Pollard III, Director of Black Church Studies Program at Candler School of Theology

From participants

“My personal experience has been that my political activities and my faith communities do not often cross over — amazingly — and I long to find ways to help my faith community see many of these political issues as faith issues.”

“The curriculum is a tool, a framework in which to reach out and stimulate discussion and reflection. That in itself is action... I would recommend this training.”

Faith Seeking Peace
is a program of WAND Education Fund that seeks to reorder national priorities from militarism toward peace and real security. We do this by educating women of faith and engaging their voices and values in the political process.

SEEKING PEACE

Annual Facilitator's Training

March 7, 2008 • Washington, DC • Prior to Ecumenical Advocacy Days

WAND Education Fund will be presenting the Faith Seeking Peace annual facilitator's training as a pre-event to Ecumenical Advocacy Days this spring.

Friday, March 7, 2008

8:30am - 12:30pm

National WAND office on Capitol Hill

322 4th St., NE | Washington, DC

The training will introduce the Faith Seeking Peace curriculum to clergy, lay leaders, and partner organizations.

We will explore concepts of facilitation integral to leading a study of this valuable resource.

All participants will receive copies of the curriculum and engage in the hands-on exercises.

To learn more about this workshop, or to register to attend, contact Rev. Amanda Hendler-Voss at ahvoss@wand.org (While the training is free, there is a registration fee of $20 to cover refreshments and materials.)
